The funny thing that have happening to me is when me and my friend was getting ready to play kickball one of my friend name Jonathan went up first to kick the ball, but when he start to kick the ball he accidently kick the ball backward and it went straight to my face and I fell on the ground kinda hard but it was all a accident so it wasn't a big deal anyway. And this happen during fifth grade, and Jonathan also fell on the ground too on his back. When I was in fourth grade me and my whole friend started a five on five basketball game and the goal was to get to fifteenth point, but when we was trying to start the game there was this new neighbor that start playing with us his name was Alex Iverson and really thought his granddaddy is Allen Iverson the NBA basketball player that play for the Seven Sixer in the two thousands. But anyway he was on my team but when he started playing with us he never passed the ball even when I'm wide open on the three-point line he still go straight to the paint and get block everytime. After that game we lost because of that Iverson boy I said "I can't play with you no more because you don't know how to passed the ball at all period". During summertime I had summer basketball practice and this was in seventh grade. Everytime when practice almost finna start me and all my teammate always playing around in the locker room like throwing each other on the ground for no reason, but when our coach came in the locker room all of us start getting dress because we didn't want to run the entire time in practice. When I went to John Pittard elementary school it was always have some bad situation in that school. Like people keep getting in trouble for saying word biscuit with is pretending to say the cussing word, and also fighting in school. The best time I ever had in my life was in fifth grade, because we had a cookout on the last day at school, play kickball, four square, flag football, basketball, soccerball, and also we did some funny games that the teacher made for the last twenty minute of school. After that there were some groundhog around the playground on Groundhog's day there were two of them and some people keep stepping on them on purpose it was a really bad day.
